Snow cover conditions and avalanche danger: Last night light snowfalls (5-15cm) occurred the western Alpine region, above 1500-1700 m, less snow to the east. The new snow below 2000 m has already disappeared. Daily temperatures will lead to possible releases and small avalanches of superficial humid or wet snow from walls and very steep slopes above 1900-2000 m, especially on the Carniche Alps due to the highest amount of new snow. Under the same conditions small triggering of surface layers of humid or wet snow will be possible when transiting on skis. Forecast danger level: 1 (low) increasing to 2 (moderate) from late morning on the Carniche Alps, 1 (low) throughout the mountain territory.

Forecast for Thursday 06 April 2017, reliability: 80%

In the morning the snowpack will be stable, danger will increase in the afternoon.

Thermal Zero: 2000 m
T.average 1000: 7 °C
T.average 2000: -1 °C

Weather by OSMER - ARPA FVG:
Partially cloudy to variable sky. On the Prealps brief local showers may be possible.

Snow cover conditions and avalanche danger: Cloudy to variable and zero degree level at 2000 m. The thickness of the snow cover is low everywhere. On the Giulie Alps and eastern Carniche Prealps snow is present only in limited areas to the N. No avalanche danger there. Snowpack generally stable and well consolidated in the morning. During warm hours isolated releases of humid or wet snow may be possible from very steep slopes under rocks and walls. Forecast danger level: 1 (low) on the Carniche and Giulie Alps and western Carniche Prealps. No danger on the eastern Carniche Prealps and the Giulie Prealps.
